B. Construction Technology

This refers to measures beyond code requirements to make the project more energy efficient, durable and environmentally responsible. The energy efficiency and indoor air quality sections may not apply to all projects (i.e. decks and other outdoor living areas).

Using point form, comment on the following items, as applicable, and include supporting evidence from manufacturers of the products and technologies used, where possible.

Energy efficient features, including the building envelope, mechanical systems, site orientation, use of materials with low embodied energy and other features (if relevant, include documented comments on reduced energy costs and increased occupant comfort).

Materials and operating systems that increase the durability of the house

Techniques used to reduce waste, re-use materials, and mitigate negative impacts on plant and animal life

Technologies to improve indoor air quality and/or otherwise provide healthier living conditions for the occupants

40 pts

C. Project Management

Comment, in point form, on the professional manner in which the work was carried out (for instance, developing the design, minimizing homeowner inconvenience, communicating with homeowners and keeping the project on schedule and budget).

20 pts
